An Account of an old Earthen Veſſel, lately found near York.

THIS Earthen Veſſel deſcribd Fig. 2. ſuppoſd by ſome to be an Urn, by others to be a Flowerpot, was found lately at the Brickilns without Bowthant Bar, near York: the Clay of this Veſſel is of the Colour of Halliſax Clay when burnt; the Potters part is well performd; the Face being boſſed from within, with the Finger, when upon the Wheel; and ſome ſtroaks of Red paint, about the curls of the Hair, and Ey-brows; and two Red threads about the Neck: on the back-ſide of the Veſſel, a Leaf is drawn in Red, which is ſtill very freſh; but no Glazing, neither upon the Clay nor Red colour; the Face upon the Veſſel is as large as that of a middleſizd Woman: the Veſſel it ſelf is preſervd in the Muſæum Aſhmoleanum at Oxford.

Fig: 2.

Fig: 1.

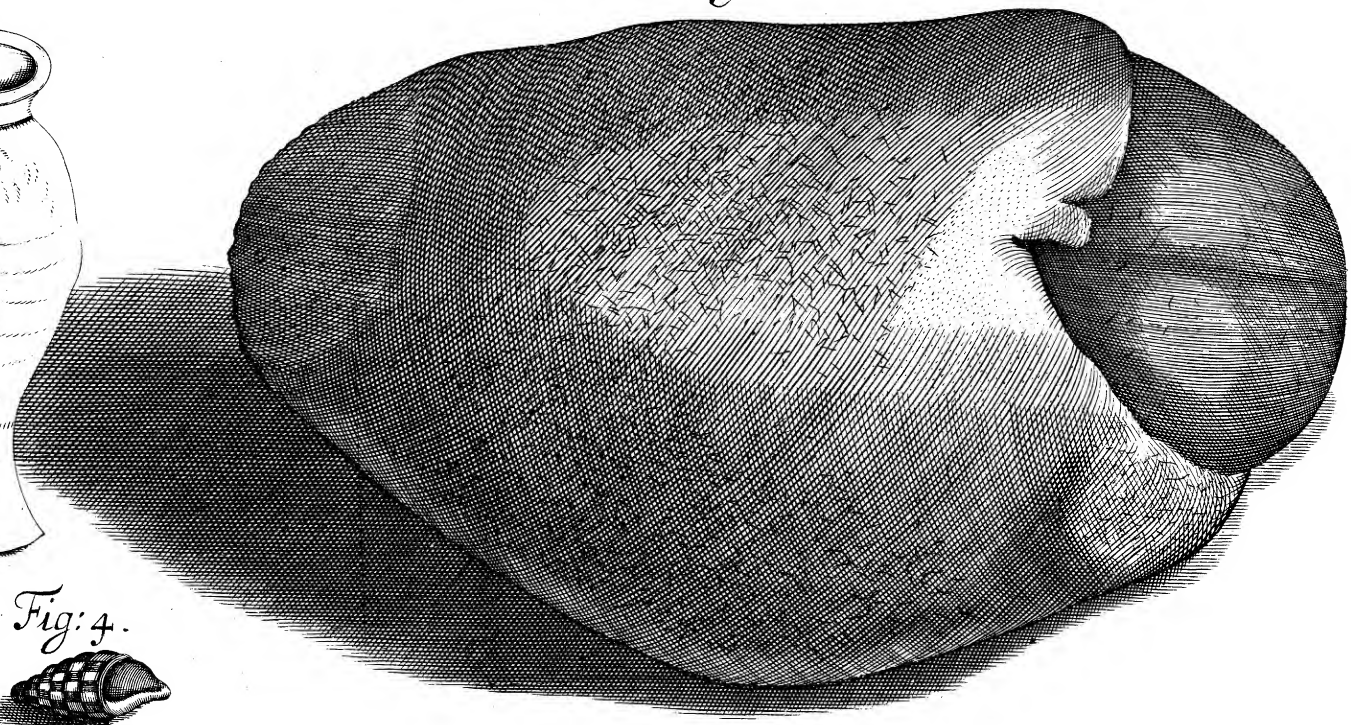

Fig: 3.
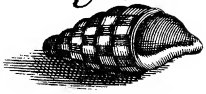

Fig: 4.